A Preparedness Parade For Honolulu

With preparedness parades held in many cities of the mainland—and all with distinct success—it is natural that Honolulu should take a lively interest in such processions. Various suggestions of a local parade have been heard for several months. Interest is now growing and is as keen in military as in civilian circles.

As an integral part of the United States, Hawaii is unique in race-mixtures and in combination of bloods all flowing into ultimately American veins. A preparedness parade here will have a greater patriotic significance than in any state. The military importance of the islands, and of Oahu particularly, and the military organizations stationed here, give another vital aspect of national interest.

The army and navy on Oahu should, and doubtless will, take a prominent part in initiating and carrying out a parade of the kind proposed.

Suggestions are in order for a suitable date. It will take at least three weeks to arrange a spectacle on an appropriate scale. But Regatta Day and the Civic Convention and County Fair at Hilo take up the last two weeks of September. Late in October and early in November the territorial political campaign will be in full swing. The suggestion has been made that the parade be held on Kalakaua Day, provided the plans already made for this day have not progressed so far that a large feature of this kind cannot be added. Kalakaua Day will be virtually a holiday, anyway, and certainly the preparedness parade should be on a holiday. The very widest participation and the very widest attendance should be sought.

Business houses naturally object to too frequent holidays. It will be difficult to get the support of the business community for a parade on a day not now settled on as a holiday. Though November 16 is rather far off for the preparedness parade, it may prove the best date available, and certainly a procession of the sort contemplated will add a finely impressive feature to the observance of this occasion.

BRINGING HONOR TO HAWAII.

Hawaii youths of all races make good records in mainland educational institutions. And these records are usually in all-around excellence, though most notice is often given to athletic achievement. But scholarship engages the attention of even more Hawaii students than does the football field or the track, and it is certainly true that the average scholarship of our students at mainland schools and colleges is higher than the average scholarship of mainland student bodies.

A letter from Paul Super, former general secretary of the Honolulu Y. M. C. A., relates that at the annual Collegemen's Conference in Wisconsin last June there were six young men from Honolulu, including himself. McKinley High School and Mills contributed the young Honoluluans to the states' college. Most of such students return to Hawaii, not only with degrees in various professions but with a broader outlook upon life and with a deeper appreciation of Americanism than mere academic education can give.

The records of the students who have won success on the mainland are a constant inspiration to hundreds of young men and women, boys and girls, of Hawaii. This coming generation of citizens is the hope of the future. What Hawaii will be forty or fifty years from now depends largely on their being now wideawake, patriotic, broad-minded and ambitious in citizenship duties.

HOW COLONEL HARVEY SIZES IT UP.

(By Col. George Harvey in North American Review.)

We enter upon a four-months' campaign which promises well for the Republic. Neither of the two candidates is a superman; neither is as yet or likely to become a popular hero; but each unquestionably personifies the best that his party has to offer—and more could not be expected. That, of course, is the vital and most gratifying fact, but in addition it should be noted that each as a candidate is positively the strongest that could have been named. It is as silly for the Democrats to insist that they wanted Hughes as it would be for the Republicans to say that they would not have preferred another—any other—to Wilson.

To those temporarily benumbed supporters of the administration who demanded the nomination of Roosevelt in order "to make an issue," which now, alas, cannot be raised between two candidates whose dissimilarities are only physical and facial, we remark blandly that if such be the case the only point to be determined is whether a majority of the voters are Democrats. But such is not the case. We doubt if there exist in America two men descended from the same stock, reared in like environments and educated by a substantially uniform process who bear slighter resemblance, one to the other, temperamentally, constitutionally or morally than Mr. Wilson and Mr. Hughes. Analysis of their distinguishing traits by way of contrast, which incidentally we shall adventure in due time, should prove at least interesting and, unless we err in our surmise that the ultimate issue will be character, perhaps important.

We are less concerned by the World's heralding of Mr. Hughes as "the Kaiser's candidate" and pronouncing his declaration that he is an out-and-out American "surprising and amazing." Even the Times, which is setting a hot pace for the World in supporting the President, has the grace to admit that "Mr. Hughes has done his part to take the hyphen out of politics" and that Mr. Wilson and Mr. Hughes combined have put it out altogether.

But enough! We of independent—not neutral—minds have four long months in which to discuss issues and weigh candidates,—and be assured that the task will be performed with painstaking thoroughness. It goes without saying that, for our part, we shall puncture humbug and deride hypocrisy whenever and wherever those detestable concomitants of a political campaign may appear. In return for this service to our contemporaries, may we not hope that neither of the candidates be likened to Lincoln? It does not seem as if we could bear it. Hughes is Hughes and Wilson is Wilson,—which should satisfy the partisans of each. So "why," in the words of Whistler, "flap in Velasquez?"

One word more and we have done. It is an important election, of course, involving issues of great moment to our beloved Republic and to all mankind. But there is no crisis.

Believe us, guided by either Wilson or Hughes, the country is as safe as a clock.

National Committeeman Robert W. Breckons has applied the soothing-syrup to the squalling political child commonly known as the Republican territorial central committee, and it probably will not be necessary to walk the floor with the infant during the nights from now to the November election. As a political pacificator par excellence, Bob has lost no astuteness during his recent mainland trip. None of the threatened resignations on the committee are likely to materialize and the so-called "stand-patters" are standing as pat as ever, so that it is obvious the pacification has been made on the basis of internal adjustment. Democrats who have been waiting with ghoulish glee for a grand bust-up are doomed to bitter disappointment.

Boston is now threatened with a visit from the German submarine Bremen, though no one knows exactly where this peaceful merchantman will make its landfall. If it comes here, there will be enough people among us, undoubtedly, to lionize its officers and men, though others would prefer to see, and to welcome in a somewhat different way, the submarine which destroyed the Lusitania. It is evident that the German government is intending to continue the pleasing performance of sending these wolves of the sea in sheep's clothing to our shores for the purpose of keeping our government tangled up and sowing the seeds of discord.—Boston Transcript.

Champ Clark, defeated by Woodrow Wilson for the Democratic nomination four years ago, is not sulking in his tent. He has delivered some fine campaigning for Wilson during the intervening four years in the way of congressional support for the Wilsonian policies, and he has now opened the Wilson 1916 fight. Clark is not an impossibility for 1920.

China has protested against the sending of more Japanese troops into her territory. Japan justifies the action on the ground that Japanese were killed in disorders at Cheng Chia Tung. This is familiar ground. Germany by about the same method got a foothold in Tsingtau.

Germany says she is willing to quit Belgium on the payment of forty billion marks indemnity. To the mind untrained in diplomacy and international customs, the indemnity seems always to be on the wrong foot.—San Francisco News-Letter.

Now that the marvelous Japanese tennis-player Kumagae has defeated Champ William Johnston, the mainland jingoists will doubtless have a new flurry on the yellow peril.

Kalakaua Day as a territory-wide celebration is beginning to appeal to a lot of good folk who couldn't see anything in the plans for a long time after they were broached.

Every public improvement guaranteed for Hawaii by appropriations in Washington is a spur to consistent local improvement by local government.

To a man up a tree—and he doesn't have to be very far up, either—it appears that President Wilson is by no means leading a forlorn hope this fall.

A few more mainland strikes and the national Democratic campaigners will "pipe down" on the "contented labor" tune.

Greece's "benevolent neutrality" has been badly bent in a dozen new places since the Allies started their last Balkan drive.

Another explosion has occurred in a munitions plant, and of course it is accidental—like all the others.

There are other swimmers, but there's only one Duke. Come back? Why, he has never gone back.

Somebody now ought to get out a "Who's Zoo in Hawaii."

INTER ASHES OF LATE ATTORNEY IN OLD NUUANU

Friends and relatives of the late attorney to the number of more than 100, including many members of the local bar, attended the funeral services of Abram S. Humphreys at the family residence, Wilder avenue, last Saturday afternoon.

In accordance with the attorney's wishes, the services at the house were simple. David Cary Peters, minister of the Christian Church, presided. The playing of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" on the phonograph opened the services, this being followed by the reading of the 23d psalm. Prayer and the playing of the record "Lead Kindly Light" completed the services.

Many beautiful floral tributes were in evidence, being banked about a silver urn containing the ashes of the deceased. A large floral piece was presented by the staff of the local circuit court. Following the services the ashes were interred in the Nuuanu cemetery.

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

—R. W. BRECKONS: New York, New England and Illinois will go for Hughes. Put that down as a political prophecy. In New York Governor Whitman will probably have a harder time than Hughes, who will get a big vote. The result of the presidential race in general? Well, it depends a whole lot on what happens in Mexico and Europe between now and then. But as it stands, Hughes will be elected.

—TERRITORIAL SECRETARY THAYER (from Glacier National Park): This one is too good not to send home. On the veranda this evening our ears were assaulted by the strains of a phonograph playing "On the Beach at Waikiki." I went indoors and looked at the record. It was labeled "On the Shore at Le Lelele," by Kallimal and Kern, and produced by the Columbia Phonograph Company. Such is fame! The Hawaii Promotion Committee ought to get busy.

Is the Cry of Backward Men Who Have "Nothing to Advertise"

Paid Publicity knows no stopping place short of the goal of success.

Success that comes from running to cover and keeping quiet is very unusual and carries little or no satisfaction to the one who reaps it.

Success scored through the medium of Paid Publicity, radiates warmth of human sympathy and cooperation.

Paid Publicity "Hollers whoa!" only to the business and the men who are crooked and ought to be stopped.
